Lions

The lion is the second largest living cat after the tiger and mostly live in eastern and southern Africa. Lions live for ten to fourteen years in the wild and they typically inhabit savanna and grasslands, although they may take to bush and forest.

The lion is larger than the tiger. The mane of the adult male lion, unique among cats, is one of the most distinctive characteristics of the species and it makes the lion appear larger.

Lions spend much of their time resting and are inactive for about 16 hours per day. They spend an average of two hours a day walking and 50 minutes resting.

Unusually for most of the big cats, lionesses hunt in groups, called prides, and they are more active than the male. They are capable of killing when predators such as leopards, cheetahs, hyenas, and wild dogs. The male lion usually stays and watches its young while waiting for the lionesses to return from the hunt.

Lions interact with one another through powerful tactile gestures such as head rubbing and social licking, which have been compared with grooming in primates. Head rubbing (muzzling one's forehead, face and neck against another lion) appears to be a form of greeting.

Lions have the loudest roar of any big cat. Lions tend to roar in a very characteristic manner, starting with a low deep, long note that falls into a series of shorter ones. They roar often near at night, but sounds include snarling, purring, hissing, coughing, meowing, growling and roaring.

Giraffe

The Giraffe is an African mammal and the tallest living animal. It is known for its extremely long neck and legs. A giraffe features include a coat like fur and patches of colour on its fur similar to a leopard's spots. Giraffes are scattered throughout Africa and usually inhabit savanna, grasslands and open woodlands.

Fully grown giraffes stand 5-6 meters tall, with males taller than females. Located on both sides of the head, the giraffe's long, bulging ossicones give it great height. Giraffes see in colour and their senses of hearing and smell are also sharp. Giraffes also have the ability to close its nostrils to protect against sandstorms and jets.

A giraffe coat has dark blotches or patches. These usually can be orange, chestnut, brown or black in colour, separated by light hair. Each individual giraffe has a unique coat pattern. The pattern serves as a camouflage allowing it to blend in the light and shade patterns of savanna woodlands.

Giraffes feed on leaves, twigs, shrubs, grass and fruit and eat around 34 kilos per day, feeding in at its highest during the first and last hours of daytime. When stressed, giraffes may chew the bark of branches. Although herbivores, giraffes have been known to visit carcasses and lick dried meat off bones.

Giraffes typically live up to 25 years in the wild. Because of their size, eyesight and powerful kicks, adult giraffes are not a targeted prey. However predators include lions, leopards, spotted hyenas and wild dogs. Wild crocodiles can also be a threat to giraffes when they bend down to drink.
